Know Your Stuff

BY JEAN ALLEN

There's a pretty clear message in today's Gospel: don't get hung up on material possessions. Once again Jesus is teaching about the value of travelling light so there must be something important about it.

My husband and I had to clean out the suite of a deceased man who was a hoarder. I understand that hoarding is a mental illness but I think hoarding on some level is a characteristic of most of us. There are certain possessions we find very difficult to throw away: good boxes or plastic containers, old keys or pens, personal papers, books, old electronics, old tools...the list goes on and on. Cleaning a hoarder's space was an in our faces illustration of how easy it is to go from having a few unnecessarily stuffed storage areas and drawers to having possessions take over one's life and one's peace.

We keep stuff because we might need it later. It might come in handy. And that way of thinking is actually a challenge to our daily faith. As long as we hold on to anything to ward off future need or inconvenience, we feel more in control and more self-sufficient. Those two things are really not healthy goals in the spiritual life because they hinder our complete trust in God, especially in this moment where God dwells. Control and self-sufficiency are future considerations and God is not in the future – not the futures we tend to imagine and live in anyway.

The less we hang on to stuff, the freer we become to turn our eyes upon our God of provision. There is no sin in having possessions; the critical question is, "Can I easily let go of this if necessary?" If the answer keeps coming up, "No! I can't let this go," then it's time to take stock of the whys of our possessions. They may be keeping us from saying to the Lord,

"Your love and your grace are enough for me."

The Pope's Penitential Pilgrimage Continues

Pope Francis' penitential pilgrimage to Canada is now underway. As this historic week unfolds through the planned events in Edmonton and surrounding areas, Quebec City and Iqaluit, please continue to pray for the Pope, for Indigenous people of this country, and for healing and reconciliation.

There are many opportunities to participate remotely in the remaining events of the Pope's visit. As we shared last week, the papal visit website continues to have livestream coverage featuring interpretation in many languages, including Indigenous languages and American Sign Language. The site also has feeds from Vatican TV that include commentary in English, French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese and German. Additionally, Salt & Light Catholic Media Foundation has a dedicated site with information and broadcast details for the papal visit.

If you would like to financially support this apostolic journey, you can donate online. All donations go directly to supporting the logistical costs for the papal visit, which has been organized almost entirely by volunteers. Your help is greatly appreciated to ensure the financial means that will further support this journey of our Holy Father in Canada towards healing and reconciliation.
