The Love Path

BY JEAN ALLEN

Last week, we looked at how John was expecting the coming of a God of wrath and vengeance – and got Jesus instead! In the Gospel this week, Jesus comments obliquely on John's expectations when he lists his acts for John's disciples to tell John and ends up with, "And blessed is anyone who takes no offense at me." Was he aware that John could not only be confused that the Christ was not a roaring lion but also offended that those he deemed broods of vipers were not getting their just punishment? Could John have been consoling himself in prison that Herod and all the Pharisees would soon be swept away in God's wrath.

Later Jesus said that nobody born of a woman was greater than John the Baptist but then he ends on a curious note. "...yet the least in the kingdom of Heaven in greater than he." He wasn't just talking about those who die and go to heaven because Jesus told us that the Kingdom of God is near to us and the Kingdom of God is within. Those who dwell in the Kingdom of Heaven are those who have fully embraced the New Covenant of love, mercy and forgiveness, for themselves and for others. By embracing, fully, the New Covenant we can bring heaven to earth, just as Jesus brought heaven to earth through his forgiveness, love and mercy.

We aren't just mourning in lowly exile here. We are greater than John the Baptist and we have choices. We can bring wrath or we can bring peace. We can swim in resentment or we can forgive those who trespass against us. We can stand rigidly righteous in law or we can dispense the softness of mercy.

If we don't choose the path of love, it's as if we are taking offense at Christ and his Way. We are choosing to not be one of even the least in the Kingdom of heaven.

This Advent – and always – choose love.

Study Guide about Human Trafficking now available

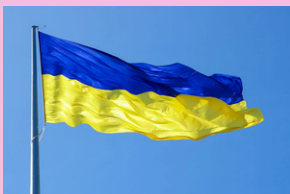

All are invited to the online launch of "Working Towards Freedom", a new study guide about human trafficking. The guide was developed jointly by the Diocese of Victoria, the Archdiocese of Vancouver, and the Diocese of Saskatchewan, and is based on the CCCB's recent Pastoral Letter on Human Trafficking and Sexual Exploitation in Canada. Through prayer and education, the guide leads participants to become more aware of the human trafficking that is occurring in our midst, and helps them learn how to bring to light situations where people may be in danger. The webinar will provide an overview of each section of the guide and recommendations on how to use it. The webinar is free, but advance registration is required at:
