

If there is one thing that the pandemic has revealed, it is the extent to which we are all interconnected. As such, our world will not be safe until we are all safe and it is essential that we are all

Recovering Together.

The pandemic has changed all our lives. Everyone has suffered. But it has also shown us that those who were marginalized to begin with have suffered the most. The incessant exploitation of our common home has triggered the climate crisis and pushed millions into poverty.

- ♣ How can you wash your hands when you do not have access to soap and clean water?
- ♣ How can you practice physical distancing when you live in a refugee camp?
- ♣ How can you get medical attention when there is no access to health care?
- ♣ How can you feed your family when you are locked down with no social safety net?
- ♣ How can you protect yourself without access to public health information?

With your support, Development and Peace is helping to answer all these questions in Latin America, Africa, Asia and the Middle East. While this virus has taught us how interconnected our human family is, it has also taught us that we cannot recover alone.
